

The cost at which high speed internet is being provided by Comcast is outrageous. After having paid approx. $20 a month for a year, they have jumped the rate to over $42 per month, justifying it by saying that I had a promotional deal for a year. Irregardless, $42 a month for high speed internet is highway robbery. After looking into who else can provide high speed internet I have found that Comcast is the only one "allowed" to service this area due apparently to some laws (provided I have all my facts correct). I find that the lack of competition in this area is forcing customers like me to pay whatever Comcast feels like charging (know wonder they can afford to try to take over Disney). I believe that the FCC needs to review and hopefully change (provided more competition) the way high speed internet is provided to customers in this area of Michigan.
